The following dispatch was received in this city last night:

BERLIN, Monday, August 6, 1866.

The first meeting of the Chambers was held to-day.

The members rose and cheered the King and the Prussian victory.

COUNT STEINBERG was elected President of the Upper Chamber.

LONDON, August 6, 1866.

The King of Prussia has returned to Berlin. The municipality presented to him a congratulatory address.

In reply the King expressed his thanks. He pointed out that Prussia had drawn the sword not only for her independence, but for the reorganization of Germany. The first, said the King, had been assured;

the second, may, by the help of God, also be obtained.

Everything promised a happy future for Prussia, as an honorable and lasting peace is imminent.

The King in person opened the Prussian Chambers yesterday. The following is his speech in full:

"Elected, Noble, and Illustrious Gentlemen of both Houses of the Diet: Now I have assembled around me the representatives of the country, my heart impels me to express, first of all, from this place, my own, and my people's, thanks for God's grace in his goodness, which has assisted Prussia and her sons in their sacrifice not only in waging war, but also in maintaining the frontiers of our country. The Prussian army, which has distinguished itself in every battle, has been successful in every engagement, and has won a glorious victory over the French."

The Napoleon, the Third, arrived at Berlin on the morning of the 26th.

The cable was interrupted off Crookhaven on the evening of the 26th, and reached Liverpool on the afternoon of the 27th.

The City of Manchester arrived off Crookhaven on the 28th, and reached Liverpool on the 29th.
